L6: How did the "Lost Generation" impact the village of Stubbington?

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

- ☐ Understand the scale of the "Lost Generation" and how it affected local communities.
- ☐ Apply the concept of micro-history to understand the human cost of the war.

Vocabulary Check

Write a clear definition and a historically accurate sentence for the term: Commemoration

Q1. Where was the Stubbington War Memorial erected in 1922?

Q2. How many local names from Stubbington and Hill Head are carved into the memorial?

Q3. Study Source A (the Stubbington War Memorial). Why are local memorials like this crucial for a historian studying the human cost of the First World War?

Q4. Why is the story of the three Lowry brothers historically significant when studying the impact of the First World War?

Q5. Study Source B (the "Dead Man's Penny"). What does this source tell us about how the British government attempted to console grieving families, and why might it have felt inadequate?

Q6. Instructions: Choose one of the five historical investigation tasks below. Use the provided web links and your source packs to uncover the hidden realities of the Stubbington fallen.

Path 1: The 1911 Census (Bringing the Names to Life)

War memorials only give us names and initials. To understand what the village actually lost, we need to see who these men were before the war.

- Your Task: Using the provided 1911 Census records for the Lowry family, find out the following: How old were the brothers? What were their jobs? Who else lived in the house? Write a short paragraph explaining how reading the census changes the way you look at the names on the memorial.
- Scaffolding Tip: Look closely at the "Occupation" column. Were they farm laborers, shop workers, or tradesmen? Think about how their sudden absence would impact the village's daily life and economy.
- Helpful Link: The National Archives: 1911 Census Guide

Path 2: Mapping the Tragedy

During the war, entire streets could be plunged into mourning in a single day.

- Your Task: Select ten names from the Stubbington memorial. Using the Commonwealth War Graves Commission website to find their home addresses, plot them on a historical map of Fareham/Stubbington from the 1910s.

- Scaffolding Tip: Do you notice any clusters? Are there multiple casualties on the same street? Write a sentence explaining what it would have felt like to be a postman delivering telegrams on that street in 1916.
- Helpful Link: National Library of Scotland: Side-by-Side Historic Maps

Path 3: Decoding the Commonwealth War Graves (CWGC)

Historians use death records like detective clues to figure out where and how men fought.

- Your Task: Search for the Lowry brothers on the CWGC database. Look at their date of death and the name of the cemetery or memorial where they are listed (e.g., the Thiepval Memorial or the Menin Gate).
- Scaffolding Tip: If a soldier died in July 1916 and is listed on the Thiepval Memorial, they almost certainly died at the Battle of the Somme. If they died in late 1917 near Ypres, it was likely Passchendaele. Write down which major battles the Stubbington men were caught in based on your findings.
- Helpful Link: Commonwealth War Graves Commission Database

Path 4: Evaluating the Memorial Design

Most towns built statues of soldiers with rifles or giant stone crosses. Stubbington built a wooden shelter over a water pump.

- Your Task: Write a visual analysis of the Stubbington War Memorial. Why do you think the designer (a grieving mother) chose a water pump shelter rather than a glorifying statue of a soldier?
- Scaffolding Tip: Think about what a water pump represents (community, life, civilian utility) versus a soldier statue (combat, glory, military). What does this tell us about how the local community wanted to remember their dead?

Path 5: The Missing Voices (Historiography)

War memorials only record the dead, meaning the "visible" history often masks the invisible trauma of the survivors.

- Your Task: Challenge yourself to consider who is not on the memorial. Are there men from Stubbington who survived but returned with severe shell shock or missing limbs?
- Scaffolding Tip: Write a short paragraph explaining why relying solely on a war memorial might give a historian an incomplete picture of how the war actually impacted a village like Stubbington.

Think-Pair-Share: Q7 How did the loss of a generation impact small communities like Stubbington?

1. My Thoughts (Think)	2. Partner's Thoughts (Pair)

End of Unit Assessment: The Historians' Debate on the Treaty of Versailles

(See Textbook Page 28)

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

- ☐ Identify and explain the main difference between two historical interpretations.
- ☐ Suggest reasons why two historians might produce different interpretations of the same event.
- ☐ Construct a balanced, evidence-rich 16-mark essay evaluating a historical interpretation.

Final Assessment

Scaffolding & Hints:

- Intro: Define the debate. State that historians disagree about whether Versailles was a reasonable compromise or a disastrous mistake.
- Para 1 (Agree with Interpretation 2): Discuss the harshness of the terms — £6.6 billion reparations, Article 231 (War Guilt), loss of territory (Alsace-Lorraine, Polish Corridor), military restrictions (100,000 army, no air force). Explain how this humiliation fuelled extremist movements like the Nazis.
- Para 2 (Disagree — support Interpretation 1): Argue that Germany was not destroyed. It kept its industrial base, national unity, and population. The reparations were reduced (Dawes Plan 1924, Young Plan 1929). The real problem was the failure to enforce the treaty in the 1930s when Hitler remilitarised the Rhineland.
- Para 3 (Your own judgement): Was the treaty the CAUSE of WW2, or was it Hitler's aggression? Could the treaty have worked if it had been properly enforced?
- Conclusion: State your overall judgement clearly. Was Keynes right that the treaty was a 'vindictive catastrophe', or was MacMillan right that the real failure came later?

Q1. How far do you agree with Interpretation 2 that the Treaty of Versailles was 'a vindictive catastrophe that made a second world war inevitable'?

Exam Sources & Interpretations

Source A

Interpretation 1 (based on Margaret MacMillan, 'Peacemakers', 2001): The Treaty of Versailles was a reasonable and pragmatic compromise given the impossible circumstances of 1919. The victorious leaders faced enormous public pressure to punish Germany, yet the treaty stopped short of destroying the German state entirely. Germany kept its national unity, its industrial heartland, and its potential to recover. The reparations bill, while enormous on paper, was repeatedly reduced and restructured throughout the 1920s. The real failure was not the treaty itself, but the refusal of Britain and France to enforce it consistently in the 1930s when Hitler began openly violating its terms.

Source B

Interpretation 2 (based on John Maynard Keynes, 'The Economic Consequences of the Peace', 1919): The Treaty of Versailles was a vindictive catastrophe that made a second world war inevitable. By imposing crippling reparations of £6.6 billion, stripping Germany of 13% of its territory and 10% of its population, and forcing the humiliating 'War Guilt Clause' (Article 231) onto a proud nation, the Allied leaders planted the seeds of German resentment and extremism. The treaty did not create lasting peace; it created a twenty-year ceasefire. It was only a matter of time before a demagogue like Hitler would exploit the fury of a humiliated people to tear the treaty apart and plunge Europe back into war.

Q2. What is the main difference between Interpretation 1 and Interpretation 2 regarding the Treaty of Versailles?

Q3. Suggest one reason why Interpretation 1 and Interpretation 2 give different views about the Treaty of Versailles. You may use evidence from this unit to help explain your answer.
